My dear Sir.

Feeling under great obligations to you as my predecessor and for the brief hints you gave me respecting my conduct among this people I shall venture to trouble you with a very few lines at this time. And first, I am obliged to you for the use of your books which I shall send to N. H. by E. Gilbert. They were very useful to me until the arrival of my own. —

My school I find quite pleasant tho' not large. I have had but 27 as yet, but shall have several more soon. Among them will be Miss M. for whom, I believe, you have some little esteem. I have seen her once at Mr. D's, and think her a very fine young lady. There is no back, I assure you, to the "ringlets flowing around her alabaster neck". I doubt not that her mind is as well adorned as her person. I shall, with pleasure, give her all the aid I can by way of instruction, on your account.

I have not become acquainted with any other ladies except Miss P. D. and the Misses Buckinghams. One of them I like very well, the deformed one I think a is a little too pedantic. I have seen several others but know little about them. They all however live in Lebanon! To enable me to answer this inquiry and others which naturally arise from it I wish you would write me by Little how you are, you are both bodily and mentally, what you calculate to go about &c, &c. Send none of your half shut letters which I am under the necessity of doing for I have not a whole one in my possession. As to things in general in this place, they are in statu quo. Your exhibition furnished matter for conversation a few days, when like all other good things it was forgotten. To-morrow I expect the parson & co to see me which you know is not very agreable tho' it must be endured. Whatever else you wish to learn respecting Lebanon you must learn from the bearer — but be sure to give me credit for it.

Yours &c
A. A. Phelps, Pedagogue emeritus.
